

Disclaimer and privacy statement

Content of the website

Da Vinci tries to ensure that the information on the website is as reliable as possible and accessible at all times. Nonetheless, there is always a chance that the information is or becomes incorrect or inaccessible. Da Vinci is not liable for any outcome as a consequence, materially or immaterially.

Intellectual property

All the content and materials, including copyright, are the property of Da Vinci. This also includes amongst others the design, logos, texts, videos and does not exclude other materials (without limitation). You may never use them for commercial or public purposes without prior written consent.

No advice

The website contains only general information and the information is not written with your personal circumstances in mind. This is why the website does not provide personal advice to do or refrain from doing anything. If you make a decision based solely on the information on this website, you do so entirely at your own risk and Da Vinci will take no responsibility.

Cookies

Cookies from third parties might be used on this website. By continuing to use this website the user agrees that the cookie policy of the third party is applicable.

Privacy

Da Vinci may store and use some of your personal data e.g. when you send in your application. Information provided will be used with integrity, always keeping the purpose of the information submission in mind, and in line with local regulation.

Da Vinci might also gather information about the use of its website. One way in which this can be done is by placing cookies.